ALC Debuts in the Old Country

Californians could be forgiven for thinking the tiny city of Solvang, Danish for "Sunny Field," has everything.

Its tree-lined streets, windmills and antique shops have earned the town bragging rights as one of the nation's favorite small-town tourist destinations. But Solvang never had AIDS/LifeCycle.

Until today. AIDS/LifeCycle will pass through this charming village at lunch, its postcard-pretty vistas forced to compete with 2,150 cyclists enjoying the midday meal in every shade of red.

If Solvang's four square miles are home to more Danish bakeries than the average town of 5,300, residents are happy to be among the state's premiere one-of-a-kinds.

Founded in 1910 by a group of Danish émigrés eager to create a foothold in their adopted home, Solvang had its first cultural anchors at a church and Danish folk school.

Solvang's distinctive architecture proliferated after World War II and a 1947 article in the Saturday Evening Post began a tradition of automobile tourism that continues to this day.

First-time visitors may recognize Solvang from the film "Sideways," much of which was filmed here.

The town's kinship with AIDS/LifeCycle is noteworthy for the Solvang Century, a March bike ride through the towns of Lompoc, Vandenberg, Santa Maria and Los Olivos that raises funds for three summer camps catering to young people with congenital heart disease.

The town holds its annual Danish Days celebration in mid-September when residents don traditional costumes and join neighbors in the street for aebleskiver, a Danish donut enjoyed with powdered sugar.

Though native garb is everywhere during Danish Days, the ALC's trademark Rød Berede Dag still promises to be an eye-popping experience.

Day 5 Highlights: Red Dresses and Quaint Solvang

Day 5 begins with a beautiful and scenic ride through the farmlands of Santa Maria. At the edge of town, you will enter one of Santa Barbara County's prettiest wine country roads. The scenery will be classic Central California with sprawling vineyards and ancient oak trees making the few challenging climbs along the way well worth the effort.

Lunch is located in the quaint tourist town of Solvang, a town founded by Danish immigrants.

Departing Solvang, you will pedal through Buellton, home of the world famous Pea Soup Andersen's and head into Lompoc on more beautiful and scenic wine country roads.

Highlight of the day: Oh my, but don't you look faabulous in that red dress!

Remembering a Compassionate Partner

Jeff Brooks is a 13-year veteran of long-distance AIDS cycling events. He first rode across the country in 1996 while battling AIDS. But this year is special. He is riding in memory of his partner, Greg, who died of cancer last October.

Jeff (r) is riding this year in memory of his partner Greg.

It was on the fifth day of AIDS/LifeCycle in 2006 that Jeff learned that Greg was suffering from a recurrence of a rare form of melanoma that was first diagnosed in 1999. Greg had planned to crew his first ALC that year, but had to cancel to undergo an MRI.

"I found out about his tumor on Red Dress Day, but he wanted me to continue the ride instead of coming home to be with him," Jeff says. "He met me at the finish line that Saturday, cheering me on and supporting this ride when he was the one who needed support after receiving the devastating news alone. Greg was that kind of man, though; thoughtful, considerate and truly compassionate."

Jeff believes that Greg's HIV-positive status was a contributing factor when the 32-year-old man got a cancer normally not seen until someone is in his 70s. This year, Jeff is carrying Greg's ashes so he can finally complete a ride with him. Afterward, Jeff will travel back to San Francisco to release the ashes in the city where they made their home together.
